Untitled (1996). Gerhard Beck (b. 1951)

After undergoing a Jungian psychoanalysis in 1995, I suddenly started drawing, which might have been the desire to express myself in pictures rather than words. In 1999, I was given a diagnosis of ADHD and Asperger syndrome. I was surprised and shocked at first, but I also felt a sense of relief because I now had an explanation for the many problems I had experienced throughout my life, such as depression, anxiety, loneliness, shyness, poor social skills and a preoccupation with only a narrow range of interests. I was prescribed methylphenidate for my attention problems, but unfortunately this brought about a paranoid psychosis and I had to spend a year in a psychiatric hospital. All my drawings are created spontaneously, the images having their origin in my unconscious.
